HONGKONG, November 1st 1898. LUED CHARLES BERESFORD'S mission—has already borne fruit, the Tsungli Yamen having granted him two thousand men to be drilled by English officers. This is presumably intended as the nucleus of foreign drilled Chinese army. The commencement is a small one; but everything must have a beginning. We hope that Lord CHARLES may achieve equal success in inducing the Chinese Government to set about reforming the civil administration. The placing of the military forces of China on a sound footing would go a long way again and enabling it to withstand aggression, but so long as rottenness and corruption prevail in the heart of the administration so long will the country's strength run to waste. It is not in the army and navy alone that foreign advice and assistance are required; they are no less necessary in the civil administration in all its departments. One of the first steps should be the placing of the internal revenue system under foreign direction. A commencement has already been made in this direction by placing the collection of lekin at the Yangtsze ports in the hands of the Foreign Customs, and it is to be hoped that the same principle will shortly be adopted in other parts of the Empire, and especially along the West River. With an honest fiscal administration and a foreign willed army and navy China would once again occupy the position in the worlto which her population and the importance of her natural re-sources entitle her.

The success of Lord CHARLES BERESPORT affords a welcome proof that the recent Palace revolution has not put an absolute stop to all progress in the country. It is possible, indeed, that recent events may even help it along, though on somewhat different lines from those laid down by KANG YU-WEI and his friends. The party now in power, if they are capable of learning by experience, rougt have realised the danger incurred by attempting to resist reform, and may be induced to look for advice in quarters where they are likely to be honestly served. Everyone must of course sympathise with the young Emperor who has been so rudely hurled from power, but if he be still alive there is yet a posmibility of his being ultimately restored to his rightful position. In the meantime the Empress Downger is in power. We are not concerned now to discuss the personal character of this old lady, which is far from being such as to excite admiration, but after the chorus of execration with which her usurpation has been greeted it is perhapsonly justice to suggest that when she discovered that a plot for her " removal" was on the eve of execution she acted as most persons siniilarly circumstanced would have done in proceeding to "remove" those who would | GREAT EASTERN AND UALEDON have "removed" her. The Empress Downger may deserve all the hard things that are said about her, but it does not follow that because she is not what she ought to be those opposed to her are angels of light. KANG YU-WEI may be credited with good intentions and patriotism, but in discretion he has been wofully lacking. All foreigners are agreed as to the necessity of reform in China, but it is not necessary or wise to throw themselves into the arms of the first lond tongued revolutionist that presents himself. Under the new regime it is to be rich quality. We are raising stone now fast hoped that such measures of reform as may be adopted will be characterised by ordinary prudence and common sense,

CORRESPONDENCE.

We do not hold ourselves responsible for the opinions expressed by our correspondents.]. STREET ROW OR RIOT?

Srr.-I was astonished to see Mr. Smith's etter in your issue of 29th inst. trying to bulittle what the French authorities did here so like to pass it off as a light matter when a Pilcher, and Alex. Ress (Secretary). yelling, howling mob of idlers, rogues, and vagabonds threaten quiet foreigners with aunihilation and make free use of bricks and stones, and would be persist in calling it a street row when Consuls are bit on their faces and Commandants of Volunteers on their backs ? This may be Mr. Smith's view, but he, of all people, should have refrained from giving expression to it in such a carping spirit, to allay fears as he declared. Your correspondent's view, as given in your issue of 27th inst., is more correct and upbinssed, and this I have no

Canton, 31st October, 1898. published a letter signed by Mr. F. B. Smith. saving that "the heading of your paragraph Riot at Canton: An attack on Shameen averted, is really too generational, but it is only because it is likely to cause unnecessary alarm to people who have friends here that I object to it." Having read the paragraph your correstowards setting the country on its legs | pondent referred to, and being a resident and an eye-witness to the disturbance on the night in question. I believe Mr. Smith's statement must have been gathered from unreliable sources or from hearsay. If it was only a street row and no attack on Shameen was ever intended cortainly the Volunteers of the British Concession would not have been called out, nor a guard of Volunteers with fixed bayonets placed on the West bridge, besides the presence of a British gunboat just opposite the British Consulate on the following morning. If Mr. Smith's sole object in publishing his view is to ridicule the action taken by the popular and energetic British Consul in calling out the Volunteers and certainly bad taste on his part to publicly expose our weakness to our neighbours, especially in this present critical time. As to his view and opinion with regard to what constitutes a riot. et me for his edification refer him to Geo. I. Stat. 2 chap. 5 section 1, which provides "that if any persons to the number of twelve or more. being unlawfully riotously and tumultuously peace and good order," &c., it constitutes a riot. Mercury. Mr. Smith concludes by saying—"As soon as the mandarin and about twenty of his brave boys armed with bell mouthed blunderbusses appeared on the scene, this riotons bloodthirsty mob burning to loot Shameen, molted like snow. The seventh ordinary general meeting of the phove was held at Shangliai on the 25th October. TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS." | Present:-Messrs. A. Melleod (Chairman), E. Lavers, E. Davis, J. Welch, H. R. Hearn, C. Holliday, W. D. Little (Directors), W. H. Anderson, L. K. Davis, H. Adams, Qua San, promptly to avert a riot. Would Mr. Smith H. Sonne, N. E. Moller, J. Stenhouse, H. W.

give some explanation of the reasons that have induced the directors to call a meeting in October instead of in April of next year. The chief object in having a second meeting in this year is to inaugurate a change which we have for cometime past thought desirable, that is to hold the annual meetings in the Antumn instead of in the Spring. As you are aware our accounts are closed on December 31st, and in these days. when business is conducted on such a keen competitive basis and profits are consequently problematical, it is a most impossible to estimate closely the result of the year's working so early as in April, when there are usually very large outstanding liabilities, the greater part of which are run off before October. But in order that there may not be more than a year's interval between the annual meetings of 1898 and 1899, it was thought desirable to have the: meeting in October, and in future the annual meeting will be held in that month. It is not effect, as the articles of association merely require that the general meeting shall be held once year. We therefore hope that the change will meetwith the approval of shareholders, as it is the course adopted by most other insurance offices. With reference to the accounts, you will see that the year 1897 has been closed by a payment of 10 per cent, interest to shareholders and contributory dividends of 10 per cent, to those who gave us business. The balance of $18,210.38 has been brought forward, and there is a credit balance of $237,642.60. This, in a year which has been a very disastrous one for all underwriting, is very satisfactory. It is impossible to compare the year 1898 with the previous requesting the presence of a gunboat, &c., it is year, as is usually done, as the accounts are only for six months, but we hope with this crodit balance and the continuance of a moderate i amount of good luck that we may be able to his body, of which three in the abdomon and present a statement of account entirely satisfactory to shareholders. There were no questions asked, and the report and accounts, as proposed by the Chairman and seconded by Mr. H. R. Hearn, were adopted assembled together to the disturbance of public | unanimously. This was all the business.-

The Gorman criticisms on this autumn's army manouvres are not complimentary to France. The superior officers are declared not to be un to date, while every onlogium is passed apon the rank and file. The plan of campaign acked unity, and the ideas of individual commanders rather than of a unitled prepared movement were apparent. This drawback is attributed to the constant changing of the Ministers of War. In several cases where progress was looked for only the statu one existed The artillery was not up to the mark-thehorses are weak also, and the cavalry displayed nothing remarkable. WOUNDS OF HE HEART

According to popular ideas a parsons who rounded in the beart drops down dead on the spot. This notion is erroneous; the victim (save the British Medical Journal) usually lives for several minutes till sufficient blood has been forced out of the wounded chamber into the perioardium to cause fatal compression of the heart from without. In the more suddenly intal cases blood escopes freely into the mediastinum through a wound in the perioardium, or death the evropathetic or pusumogastric pervehas, however, long been known to surgeons that immediate death does not always follow a wound of the heart. Pare, in 1552, reported the case f a duellist who, after receiving a sword-thrust in the heart large enough to admit the finger, pursued his opponent, thrusting at him several times, for two hundred paces, and then fell dead. Billy, in 1680, described the case of a patient who lived five days after a sword wound of the right anriels. Dr. Billings found

We had, however, to carb our carlosity and so we passed out of the city by the gigantic windmill which thrusts itself into the centre of one of the most important outlets, and on is instantaneous from shock due to damage to and on past miles of canals and miles of gaily decked homesteads. To those who may read these lines it may appear as if one wished to exeggerate but this would be almost an impossibility, and it was only when we passed out of the country on the highway between Nijmegan and Cleve that we left behind the banners and streamers. What was witnessed at the other places we journeyed through was simply a repetition of what we had seen at Rotterdam. The troops were being reviewed in the ancient market-place at Gouda as we arrived, and after the dismissal of the soldiery came the singing by all the school children, on specially erected platforms, and it was with the utmost difficulty

by. Here, however, I should like to interpose with a little scene that happened at Amsterdam, between the sensitive Hollanders and some of the English visitors to a cycling sports meeting. In order to erouse the enthusiasm of the Dutch cycling community, a series of three matches had been arranged between Mevers, the champion of the Netherlands, and Chiun, the English champion. These proved to be most unautisfactory, for when each of the riders had won one race. Chinn, it is averred brought down his opponent in the final run, and was promptly disqualified. I give bare facts as they reached me a couple of days afterwards, and nothing extenuate or set down sught in malice. But the sound was rather remarkable when we remember how very peaceful and easy going the Dutch usually are. No sooner was their companion down than China was hooted at terribly, and after missiles of the most dangerous kind had been hurled at him most victopsly he was quickly surrounded upon dismounting by an angry crowd, who threatened summary vengennes. A friend of mine who was an eye witness describes the incident as being exciting in the extreme. Chinn himself is a big, well set up fellow, with powerful limbs and the plack of a Briton, but he could do little against the how ling, exasperated crowd who had swarmed ever the barriers on to the enclosure. But they were not to wreak their vengeance on the English rider nuite so readily, it appears, for the Dunlop pacing teams were near at hand, and they at once afforded him protection, and he was got away without serious molestation. For a moment, lowever, the situation was desperate, and but or the intervention of the party of English yolists Chinn might have been severely mouled. There is conflicting testimony as to what really happened in the race, but it is some satisfaction to know that Movers who, at any rate. was as much interested as anyone in the matter. exonerates his rival entirely, and explains in a letter that the accident was caused by the state of the track. I have seen the Dutch champion ride upon mony occasions, and bare always considered him a scrapulously fair rider, and a sporteman and a gentieman to boot.
